with plenty of family-friendly plans for you to enjoy.

Visit the historic Quarter. It’s also a ‘green’ route that offers tips to discover the most beautiful corners of the Middle Ages. This path is a showcase of palatial houses, flanked by rows of gigantic banana trees first and by horse chestnuts later. Starting from the Florida Park, the guides organise tours to visit the park at different times of the year.

The Dato and San Prudencio streets and the Plaza de los Fueros are the main districts of Vitoria-Gasteiz. The Dato Street was the home of the 15th-century bishop and the University of the Basque Country. The Dato is home to the Casa de la Cultura de Vizcaya (literally Culture House of Vizcaya), which is like a forest with its rivers, hills and trails, under the branches of a 200-year-old tree of exotic species. Concerts are held in its Bandstand and, in summer, there are fireworks and light shows. There are also flea markets and stalls.
